CHAPTER III

What are the six orthodox (Āstika) schools of Indian philosophy?

What does the classification of Indian philosophy mean?

How is Indian philosophy divided into Āstika and Nāstika schools?

List the six orthodox Indian philosophical systems.

Identify the primary heterodox Nāstika schools of Indian philosophy.

What makes Buddhism a Nāstika school?

Which school considers perception the sole source of knowledge?

What distinguishes Vedic from non-Vedic schools

What does Jñāna signify in Indian philosophy?

How does Jñāna differ from Pramā (valid knowledge)?

Define Pramāṇa and its relationship to Jñāna.

Identify the primary heterodox Nāstika schools of Indian philosophy.

What makes Buddhism a Nāstika school?

Which school considers perception the sole source of knowledge?

What distinguishes Vedic from non-Vedic schools?

Why does Buddhism only recognise two pramāṇas? Critically explain.

Compare Nyaya with Buddhist epistemology.

Buddhism's perception-inference relationship.

Which sources of information does Buddhism accept?

8 What number of Pramāṇas does Buddhist epistemology accept?

Define Pratyakṣa (Perception) in Buddhist philosophy.

What is Pratyakṣa (Perception) in Buddhism?

How many perceptions do Buddhist thinkers accept?

What is Nirvikalpaka Pratyakṣa (non-conceptual perception)?

What is Anumāna (Inference) in Buddhist philosophy?

What distinguishes inference from perception?

What does Hetu (logical reason) do in inference?
What does Nyāya mean?

Who founded Nyaya?

The four Pramāṇas acceptable in Nyāya?

Define Pratyakṣa (Perception) using Nyāya